Columbus Students Headed to Titledown to Train with the Packers

February 19-20, 2011

Green Bay Packers, 2011 World Champions! I still have a hard time believing those words. My family and I moved from Green Bay last summer and I can tell you with confidence that the men you saw on the football field are quality individuals off the field. The Super Bowl celebration will continue on February 22 when twenty Columbus Middle School Students head to Green Bay, Titledown USA, as a reward from the Wisconsin Dairy Council and the NFL's Play 60 Campaign. Food Service Director Brenda Maier, has coordinated our District's participation in the program.

Fuel Up to Play 60 is an in-school program that encourages the availability and consumption of nutrient-rich foods, along with at least 60 minutes of daily physical activity. The program was founded by National Dairy Council© (NDC) and the NFL and is based on a mutual commitment to the health of the next generation. The participating students have worked hard all year on a variety of challenges prepared by the Fuel Up to Play 60 program. The trip to Green Bay was the Grand Prize winner of the Fuel up, Play 60 recipe video contest.

The winning video was put together by Columbus students Jada Bliss, Chelsey Washtock and Cheyenne Meier-Rego. The twenty students will receive a tour of Lambeau Field and be participating in activities at the Green Bay Packers indoor practice facility with former Packer receiver Bill Schroeder.

Congratulations to all the students who have participated this year. Go Packers and Cardinals!
